PRIMARY BALLET

Say hello to Primary Ballet! Their owner & director, Erin Malan, has loved the art form of ballet for as long as she can remember, but cultural aspects of ballet training have been a struggle (as they are for many). Erin studied ballet rigorously, danced professionally, and has taught at prestigious ballet schools and universities, but was never interested in starting her own studio – until last fall. The dream was born to create a program that teaches excellent ballet technique in a nurturing environment, one that does not over-stress kids or families but rather holds space for a well-rounded life.

Erin loves learning how to be a better teacher! In addition to her ballet and dance education (which includes an MFA), She has trained to be a yoga teacher and pilates teacher. “I love the perspective that different fields of study bring to my teaching and the curriculum at Primary Ballet”, Erin tells us.

Since opening last fall, Primary Ballet successfully produced their own production of Hansel & Gretel and they have performed at local events as well. According to Erin, “I’ve had several parents tell me how much confidence their kids have gained since training with me at Primary Ballet. I strive for a culture of hard work, as well as joy at the studio. I want students to become great dancers, but more importantly, I want them to become great people; I believe that ballet–taught in a holistic and healthy way–leads to both. My biggest hope is to help students understand that when they focus and work hard they are capable of doing beautiful, difficult things– in the ballet studio and without.”

Heber Valley Arts Center

In December of 2023, A 44-acre site was set aside for a future arts district adjacent to Momentum’s Jordanelle Ridge project. The site will be home to the Heber Valley Art Center & also includes plans for a amphitheater with seating for 500-5,000 patrons for a variety of events, from outdoor concerts to community gatherings like cowboy poetry readings, festivals, and student performances.
